curated SPOTLIGHT

LIBERTY LONDON

Saluting a shared passion for print and color, Anthropologie has partnered with luxury purveyor Liberty London to debut a collection of 40 pieces for the home, including upholstered furniture, dinnerware and serveware, bedding, bath accessories, and stationery. The pieces will feature 18 iconic heritage prints from the British brand's archive, reimagined by Anthropologie and paired with modern silhouettes for an unexpected feel. Among the highlights is the showstopper "Edlyn" sofa, upholstered in Liberty's signature "Feather Bloom" fabric, which the company introduced in 1971. (anthropologie.com)

PAUL FERRANTE

A legend in lighting, Paul Ferrante celebrates 60 years in the business with the reopening of its iconic Melrose Place showroom—the first antiques store in the now-famed Los Angeles design district. One of the first pieces you'll see in the reimagined space is the new "Vertical Branch Chandelier," finished in Dutch metal leaf and continuing the company's tradition of old-world artisanship. BENJAMIN MOORE

Formulated specifically for high-end designers, Benjamin Moore's new Century paint for interiors features the industry's first soft-touch matte finish, which offers a tactile experience similar to that of a soft leather glove. Made in small batches, Century brings a dimensional depth and richness to rooms in a palette of 75 midtone to dark shades. (benjaminmoore.com)

STEVEN GAMBREL

New York design legend Steven Gambrel recently turned his talents to creating a new 10-piece collection, including the shapely "Harford" pendant, for The Urban Electric Co. The lights, bench-made and hand-finished in Charleston, SC, are available in black/hewn brass, Pigeon Blue/polished nickel, and Baltic Gray/polished brass. (urbanelectricco.com)

KOHLER EXPERIENCE

Kitchen and bath industry giant Kohler is giving design professionals instant, hands-on access to its global suite of products in the first Kohler Experience Center. Located in the heart of New York City's bustling Flatiron District, the 10,000-square-foot space is designed to inspire consumers and professionals with fully functioning showers, tubs, sinks, and more—even a private bathing space where guests can try out an array of products including the Real Rain DTV+ digital showering system and VibrAcoustic hydrotherapy.
